Description of Property and Eligibility Determination (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

This one-story, stucco and brick, vernacular designed house has a side gable roof and is simple in design and ornamentation. A five-step stoop leads to the main entrance and the brick window sills are the only embellishment on this simple house.

The pre and post World War II years in Prince George's County saw a large increase in the population due to the influx of wartime workers and the close proximity of the northern portion of the county to the nation's capital. The establishment of Andrews Air Force Base in 1942 led to both military and civilian developments. The automobile allowed expansion beyond the traditional town design and as the post-World War II era progressed, new road construction resulted in the suburbanization of the previously sparsely-settled portions of northern Prince George's County. By 1950, Prince George's County's population had risen to 193, 799 persons, more than double the population of ten years earlier.

Built c. 1945, this vernacular designed house is not eligible for the National Register. Its simplistic design is typical of
